The Ex-President's Friends Take No Stock in the Post Story.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The statement published to-day that Mr. Cleveland had determined not in any event to become the Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1892, led to considerable talk and discussion here.

The report, Mr. Cleveland's friends and admirers say, does not come from sources particularly friendly to the ex-President, at one time unanimously chosen the standard-bearer of the party and they are loth to credit it. On the other hand, the anti-Cleveland men seize upon the story eagerly. Some of Mr. Cleveland's closest friends in Congress, however, say they know nothing of any purpose on his part to decline e nomination, and d Congressman Tracy, of New York says that some time ago Mr. Cleveland thought of taking himself out of the field, but friends insisted that he should not do so, and that his duty would be to obey the commands of his party, and so the ex-President agreed not to withdraw, and let the future shape itself. Ex-Secretary Whitney, who is in the city, when asked to-day about the published story that he had a letter from Mr. Cieveland declining to be a candidate said: "The story is without any foundation of truth whatever." KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT It. NEW YORK, Feb. 20.-Mr. Cleveland was engaged in a reference case this morning, and sent out word to all reporters that he knew nothing whatever about the matter published in the Washington Post about his declination of the renomination for the Presinency.
